DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Typical examples of the prior art includes Fishkin et. al., U.S.P. No. 5,265,186 which teaches an electronic shelf device (Figs.1-3) including, a slidable circuit board 21 that are received in an electronic shelf with a coiled optical fiber 26 and fiber connector 30 being connected to a fiber faceplate 31 and a movable latch 23 being attached to a railing 61 to lock the circuit board in place.

Neither Fishkin et. al. 186' or any of the references of record teaches or suggests the claimed electronic shelf comprising: circuit boards slidably received in the electronic shelf; a front faceplate attached to a first circuit board, the front faceplate having a recessed wall that defines a rearward extending recess between a bottom edge and a top edge of the first circuit board, an optical fiber connected to the first circuit board; a bail mounted adjacent the front faceplate, the bail being movable from a seated position to an extended position; means for holding the optical fiber at an intermediate location along a length of the optical fiber at a first location on the bail; the optical fiber having a first position that is contained within the rearward extending recess with the bail in its seated position; the first portion of the optical fiber being pulled forwardly from within the recess and away from the front faceplate with the bail in its extended position. (recited in independent claim 1 and also similar scope claims 7 and 19). Dependent claims 2-6, 8-18 and 20 include the limitations of the aforementioned independent claims along with other additional limitations (See dependent claims for specific limitations.) . Thus claims 1-20 are patentably distinguishable from the teachings of Fishkin et. al. and all of the cited prior art of record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
